DAMAGE CAUSED BY GENETICALLY MODIFIED ORGANISMS

(Tort and Insurance Law 27)

The debate about the use of genetically modified organisms is fuelled by the fear of potential hazards of GM farming. Classic tort law already offers remedies should such risks materialize. In some countries, this is enhanced or replaced by alternative redress schemes. This volume compares more than twenty jurisdictions in this respect, provides special analyses from an economic and insurance perspective and also addresses cross-border problems and international law.

LOSS OF HOUSEKEEPING CAPACITY

2010. Approx. 300 pages. RRP € 99.95 / *US$ 155.00

Hardcover ISBN 978-3-89949-813-4

eBook ISBN 978-3-89949-814-1

(Tort and Insurance Law 28)

Compensation for loss of housekeeping capacity is one of the main heads of damages awarded for personal injury, and therefore of great practical importance to both accident victims and liability insurers. But it has received little scholarly attention from a comparative perspective.

This study examines national approaches to the award of such damages and draws comparative conclusions, addressing both the concepts employed in different national systems and, through practical case studies, the quantum of compensation in individual cases.

Volumes 1–26 of the series were published by Springer Science+Business Media.

AIMS AND SCOPE

The Journal of European Tort Law is the first law review to be dedicated to this important and dynamic area of European private law. It is the official journal of the European Centre of Tort and Insurance Law (ECTIL) and the Institute for European Tort Law (ETL) of the Austrian Academy of Sciences. The journal contributes to the analysis and development of tort law in Europe by the publication of scholarly articles, comments and reviews. Its focus is primarily comparative, but analyses of the tort law of a single legal system may be considered for publication if the subject matter is of sufficient interest to the Journal's general readership. Comparative analyses of non-European systems from the perspective of European tort law may also be considered for publication. Submissions are encouraged from all scholarly perspectives, including economic analysis of law and socio-legal studies, and may relate to either substantive tort law, including its place in the general law of obligations, or the wider tort system, including its practical operation and its relationship with such institutions as private and social insurance.

EDITORIAL POLICY

All contributions to the JETL must be approved by the Editorial Board following a formal process of double blind peer review. The journal publishes articles and, from time to time, shorter comments on cases and legislation and book reviews. Submissions should be sent as an email attachment to submissions@jetl.eu. Authors are asked to comply with the JETL Style Guidelines. All submissions to the JETL should be in English of the quality expected in a scholarly English-language journal.
